Why Erasmus?

- Old but young
- Practical reasons:
 - On average , academic progress abroad is higher than during a corresponding period at home
 - The language proficiency of Erasmus students is about three times more than non-Erasmus students
 - Internationally experienced students turn out to be superior in many professionally relevant competences than formerly non-mobile students
 - A study period in another country makes the job seeker's CV distinct: the Erasmus increases the probability to obtain the first job of about 60%
- Personal reasons:
 - You wake up!
 - You learn about new cultures
 - You visit new places
 - You will feel the freedom and you will make several experiences that will shape and change your life
 - You meet new friends, and maybe your future partner

What are the numbers of exchanges programs involving the Management Engineering department?

- In the last six years, our department hosted 1700 students from 130 institutions and we sent 1320 Management Engineering students to 140 institutions
- We can count on more than 200 exchange partnerships distributed across 44 countries

Some reflections on our exchange programs

- Back to 2020, during the pandemics, after managing the emergency, we decided to analyse more in depth our overall international exchange program, by reflecting on the increasing numbers of students and on the type of agreements in place
- In particular, we noticed that:
 - The number of applications was much higher than the number of available Erasmus positions
 - Some agreements were with university not well positioned within the international rankings
 - Several agreements were established with other Polytechnic universities that were offering no or few courses on management and economics

A change of strategy

- Based on these considerations, we decided to take advantage of the pandemic period to revise our international exchange strategy
- In particular, we decided to:
 - Increase the number of available positions in existing agreements and expand the number of agreements
 - Increase the “quality” of the new agreements by relying on international rankings;
 - Establish new agreements with Business Schools

Why Erasmus in a Business School?

- The advantages of studying in a Business School:
 - They offer courses in Management, Finance and Economics, in line with most of our M.Sc. program and majors
 - They have a more practical and work-oriented approach, which helps to develop the soft skills that are well appreciated in the job market;
 - They have several connections and agreements with private companies, which allows to take part to international project works and internships that makes the CV even more distinct

How to select your business school?

- To select your Business School, pay attention to:
 - The study programs and the extent to which they match with courses of your own program and major;
 - The semester in which courses are offered, in order to select the best period for your exchange;
 - The practical activities, project-works and internship opportunities offered by the business school;
 - The country, city and location within the city in which the Business School is located, based on your preferences and on the language you would like to develop

How to plan your exchange experience?

- Tips to prepare your exchange experience:
 - Start planning your experience as much in advance as possible;
 - Surf the website of the host university and don't be afraid to contact their administrative offices for not available information (e.g. program, timing, and available places in each course, accommodation, facilities, language requirements, CV, motivation letters, recommendation letters (if needed));
 - Contact your Erasmus referent and office at Polimi, but be as much independent and efficient as possible, by reducing at minimum the email exchange and by proposing program substitutions that make sense;
 - Be patient, don't expect to receive answer immediately, give referents and administrative office (who are overwhelmed) the time to answer your email.
 - Don't think that "one size fits all" and don't be afraid to be the pioneer with the new exchanges programs!
